When reading a book, many people like to read books printed on paper. Others prefer to read on devices like tablets and smartphones. There is another choice, too. Some people like to listen to books, which are known as audiobooks.

Why do people choose audiobooks? Some people like to be able to do other things while listening to an audiobook, such as exercising at the gym. Other people like them because they do not need to read them, so they can rest their eyes for a while.

On the other hand, audiobooks can be expensive because they have to be recorded, not printed like normal books. Also, if people get distracted, for example, by sudden noise, they may lose track of their position in their book. This can be a problem because it sometimes takes time to locate the part they want to replay. (英検2級 7日間完成予想問題より)

Smell is important for animals that live together. For example, dogs use smell to communicate with their families. In the same way, smell is important for humans. In fact, it also helps us (21). Some scientists say that smell is important to know our family members and learn how to get along in a group. This is because smell helps us remember things from the past.

A university professor in Chicago did an experiment to learn about smell, memories, and the feeling of fear. She showed people a picture of a man while causing them pain. (22), she had them smell flowers. Later, when the people saw the picture again or when they smelled flowers, they became afraid. This is because they remembered the smell, the picture, and the pain together as one memory.

Before her experiment, the professor knew that smells could help people reduce their fears. If people saw something that they were afraid of many times, they learned not to be afraid of it. In her experiment, she had the people sleep in a room that smelled like flowers. While they were sleeping, the smell made them remember the picture in their dreams. When they woke up, they were less afraid of the picture. The professor was (23). She hopes doctors will use these results to help people in the future.

Keeping Up-to-Date

English is used by people in many parts of the world. Like other languages, new words are often added to English. These come from technological, social, or other developments. At the same time, other words stop being used because they no longer help people express their ideas. The people who create dictionaries need to constantly check which words are being used and how they are being used to make dictionaries that reflect the current state of the English language.

For a new word to be considered by dictionary editors, it must first be used widely. Dictionary editors and their assistants read books, news articles, and other sources of English to look for new words. These days, dictionary editors use computers to help them check sources more quickly and more accurately. The next step is to check the meaning of the new word. If the new word is being used by a lot of people to mean the same thing, there is a good chance that it will be added to dictionaries.
