Listen to a conversation between a student and a librarian.

(L=librarian B=boy)

L: Hello, Andrew. How can I help you today?

B: I need to find some books about the Civil War. I am doing a report for Mr. Thompson's class.

L: Okay. I can help you there but what part of the Civil War do you want to write about?

B: I don't know. I haven't decided what to write about yet. I wanted to see the books I could use first.

L: Okay. Here is our section on the Civil War. What do you think?

B: Wow! I cannot believe how many books we have about it. Where am I going to start?

L: I think you should think of an idea first and then start looking at books because you could spend years trying to read all of the books we have.

B: That sounds smart. Can you help me think of a few ideas?

L: I would love to, Andrew. You could write about the women nurses of the war or about the first ever all black regiment of soldiers. You could also write about slavery and why it started the war.

B: Thanks! Those are great ideas. I want to start reading about the women nurses. Where can I find those books?

L: The books are right over here. Is there anything else I can help you with?

B: I don't think so. Thank you very much, Ms. Klinton.
